DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

1. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

2. The text of those sections of Title 35, U.S. Code not included in this action can be found in a prior Office action.

3. The factual inquiries set forth in Graham v. John Deere Co., 383 U.S. 1, 148 USPQ 459 (1966), that are applied for establishing a background for determining obviousness under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) are summarized as follows:

1. Determining the scope and contents of the prior art.
2. Ascertaining the differences between the prior art and the claims at issue.
3. Resolving the level of ordinary skill in the pertinent art.
4. Considering objective evidence present in the application indicating obviousness or nonobviousness.

4. Claims 1-47 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over US 2003/0163380 (Vaccarelli).

5. The scope of the prior art in the field of web based/telephone based help desk is large. There for sometime now have been customer service methods that use automated technologies to assist a user. When the automated system is no longer able to assist a customer is typically routed to a live agent, who has then been able to talk to customer, IM a customer or follow through with a customer by sending email/s. Further if no agent is available there are many methods of placing a caller in a queue and then determining a priority based upon parameters. Further the prior art is filled with methods of tracking said agents performance. All of the above was known to one of ordinary skill in the art of customer service.

6. In the present case the overall illustrative embodiment of the presently claimed invention is found by looking at Fig 3 of the present application submitted 9/22/2003 (see pg 10, lines 5-25). In this figure is an email that is sent to a customer that has in it a letter to the customer and embedded in the email two links that allow a user to either indicate s/he is satisfied OR that s/he is not and needs to escalate an issue. When Fig 3, of present application is lined up directly next to Fig 3, of US 2003/0163380 (Vaccarelli) it is clear that Vaccarelli teaches an email that is sent to a customer that has in it a letter to the customer and embedded in the email two links that allow a user to either indicate s/he is satisfied OR that s/he is not and needs to escalate an issue. It may be argued that it is not exact but it would be difficult to argue that it is not an obvious variant. In addition all of the claims that flow from the dependent claims, would flow from the teachings of Vaccarelli or what was known to one of ordinary skill as discussed above.
